

Dear FCC;

It's hard to believe sometimes that we in America live in a society that values truth and balance in news and advertising. We profess to bring that ideal to other countries that aren't as fortunate, but it seems that in this election, those who have the power to disseminate factual, relevant information in order to help the citizens of this country vote for the candidate that they feel will best serve them, have decided to use that power to give us only one side.

I am deeply disturbed that our rights and freedoms are increasingly being jeopardized by big-business in the media.

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. In that spirit, I urge you to remind Sinclair of their obligation to give the truth to their viewers and show BOTH sides of the issue, not just the propaganda of one side.

Sincerely,

Kate Greising
